HARVEY

Since his diagnosis in December, John's life has been touched by scores of people. His family, friends, neighbours and acquaintances who have always been so important to him, have been sources of love and strength through their visits, prayers, calls, cards, flowers and food, and offers to help in any way they could. They have provided a network of support and encouragement. The health care system that John always believed to be a great privilege, did the utmost to get John well and keep him comfortable. His doctors and caregivers were always "the best", and he appreciated their efforts on his behalf. John often commented that we live in the best country in the world. He was proud of his connection with the merchant navy, having served on the M.T. Skaras, a Norwegian ship, during the final months of WWII. He was delighted to receive recognition as a bona fide veteran in 1995. John's garden and studio were sources of pleasure and pride. He loved his roses, rocks, and racing, and his devoted pet, Mufferty. Although he longed to be home again, he felt privileged to have made new friends in the beautiful surroundings and caring atmosphere at the hospital. Some things are meant to be. Those who have shared this great adventure, the intense experience and preparation for the final voyage, have changed our lives forever. We thank you all. Sincerely, Carrie.
